SLED CRASHES INTO SLEIGH; BOY IS INJURED

Benjamin Plank, 12, Arendtsville, Believed To Be Seriously Hurt Saturday.

Victims of two coasting accidents in the county were admitted to the Warner hospital, Saturday night, both in serious condition. They are Benjamin Plank, 12, of Arendtsville, and Doris Bittinger, 14, Aspers, R. 1.

Benjamin Plank, in company with other boys and girls of his age, was coasting on Arendt's hill, in Arendtsville, Saturday evening between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, when the sled on which they were coasting struck a driverless sleigh.

The horse hitched to the sleigh, owned by Lewis Kane, who lives on the road from Arendtsville to Cashtown, about a mile and a half from the former, slipped from its bridle as it stood tied in front of a store in Arendtsville, and started for home.

Sleigh, Sled Collide
Arendt's hill is on the road from Arendtsville to Cashtown, and the coasters apparently thought the sleigh was being driven, and would turn out for them. With Benjamin on the sled at the time was Mary Slaybaugh, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lanson Slaybaugh, of Arendtsville.

The boy, who was sitting in front of his companion, received the full force of the impact when the sled and sleigh crashed, and the girl, although momentarily stunned, was able to walk home unassisted.

The boy, however, was only partially conscious when taken to the office of Dr. W. E. Wolff, Arendtsville. The physician, after a hasty examination, advised that the injured lad be taken to the Warner hospital, where he was admitted late Saturday night. Edwin Rice, of Arendtsville, brought the boy to the hospital in his motor truck.

Young Plank is believed to be suffering from a fractured skull and an injury to his chest. He recognized only a few persons on Sunday, and attendants at the hospital this morning said his condition was serious, although not necessarily critical.

Girl Is Injured
Doris Bittinger, the other coasting victim, was injured during a recess period at her school, when a boy fell upon her as she was lying prone upon her sled.

She was not thought to be seriously injured, but when her condition failed to improve, she was brought to the hospital. She was admitted Saturday night.

The exact nature of her injuries is not known, although hospital attendants say she appears to be suffering internally, and her condition is reported by medical authorities to be critical.

The girl is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Bittinger, Aspers, R. D.

FOUR MEN DIE IN CONCRETE PILING

(By Associated Press.)
Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 26.—Four men met death shortly before noon today within the narrow confines of a 90-foot deep concrete piling, a part of the foundation of the new American Insurance building.

Construction foremen were at a loss to explain the tragedy. Three of the victims are said to have been at work within the shaft. A fourth man is said to have just come to the top. He was seen to stagger and then tumble back into the shaft.

The four bodies were taken from the bottom of the shaft at most 90 feet under ground.

DRAMATIC CLUB PLAYERS SCORE

Three One Act Plays Are Well Received by Appreciative Audiences in Brua Chapel Saturday.

Owl and Nightingale dramatic club players in three one-act sketches scored big hits with large audiences in Brua Chapel, Saturday afternoon and night. Two of the one-act performances were written by Gettysburg College students, competing for a cash prize of $25, in a play-writing contest conducted by the club last fall.

At the evening performance, Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, presented E. C. Heisenbottle, class of 1925, author of the Shakespearean farce comedy, "Two Gettysburgians in Shakespeare's Court," the winning play, with $25 in gold.

Prize Play
The prize play was as humorous, witty and unique a performance as has ever been staged at Brua Chapel, according to regular patrons of the Owl and Nightingale's past efforts. That the play has even greater possibilities, which might have warranted its lengthening to a full-sized three or four act comedy, was the opinion of many of the veteran play goers.

"Unidentified," a character sketch, written by John W. Ostrum, class of 1926, which was awarded honorable mention in the play-writing contest, and which also was produced Saturday.

Sunday, however, Old Sol came into his own again, and the robins were almost ready to return to the battlefield town.

40 GALLONS OF LIQUOR SEIZED LATE SATURDAY

Camp Hill Man Said to Have Threatened Constable Chronister, Hamilton Township.

William H. Knisely, of Harrisburg, alleged by the state police to be a bootlegger, is in jail here, while authorities are searching for Ernest Delva, of Camp Hill, an alleged accomplice, as a result of the confiscation of 40 gallons of "white mule" moonshine liquor and Delva's coupe, between the Cross Keys and Hampton, late Saturday afternoon.

According to Trooper Russell W. Frutchey, of the local state police substation, who made the arrest and confiscation, Delva threatened to shoot G. C. Chronister, of Hamilton township, who endeavored to detain him until the arrival of the police. Knisely and Delva, according to the officers, were enroute from Baltimore to Harrisburg.

When they reached a point several miles south of Hampton, the coupe, registered in Delva's name, upset, when the driver turned out of an icy rut for a machine coming in the opposite direction. Knisely, who was thrown through the wind shield in the spill, was badly cut about the face and head.

Refuses To Pay Call

Accompanied by Henry Gulden, who resides in that vicinity, Delva went to the home of Constable Chronister and called the Constable Chronister in Harrisburg, asking that a machine be sent out to assist him. Delva refused to pay for the long distance telephone call, according to the police, but gave the Chronisters an address in Harrisburg where they could get the money.

Then Constable Chronister and Frank Smith, a neighbor, accompanied Delva back to the place his machine had upset, but when they reached the place where the accident had occurred they found that the machine had pulled away, but that five five-gallon tins of liquor had been cached under a small culvert.

Suspecting bootlegging, Constable Chronister sent Mr. Smith back to his home with a message that his wife notify the state police. Delva then expressed a desire to start walking toward Hampton and when Constable Chronister and others attempted to stop him he broke away and, calling to Chronister, is alleged to have said:

Threatens Constable

"If you have a family to support, somebody else will have to support them," at the same time drawing a pistol from his pocket and holding the little group, which had gathered, at bay.

Delva continued in the direction of Hampton, but when he reached a large stone bridge crawled beneath it to hide.

Farmers having righted the coupe before Constable Chronister, Smith and Delva arrived on the scene of the accident, Knisely took the wheel, drove it a short distance away, and backed into a lane, where he is alleged to have thrown out three more five-gallon tins of the moonshine, which were found there later.

Knisely then went to the home of Bert Ruth, nearby, and Dr. Elmer Hudson, of Hampton, was notified. The physician dressed the man's injuries just before Trooper Frutchey arrived. While the state policeman was at the Ruth home, he heard a commotion on the Carlisle pike, about 100 yards away, and running from the house stated that he saw Delva start from his hiding place under the bridge, leap to the running board of a brand new automobile, and be driven off in the direction of Hampton.

Commandeering another machine, Trooper Frutchey started in pursuit of the fugitive, but gave up the chase at Hampton, fearing that other confederates of the pair might remove Knisely and the liquor.

Hugh McIlhenny, First Man Called For Jury Duty, Accepted in Trial of Hartman For Slaying Policeman

Ten Others On Panel Are Rejected For Service; Alleged Slayer Shows Little Emotion As He Faces Court In Defense Of His Life; Curious Crowd Court Room As He Is Arraigned.

Philip A. Hartman, indicted in November for the murder of Francis L. Haley, of Pottsville, state policeman, on the Lincoln Highway, in front of Graeffenburg Inn, twelve miles west of here, October 14, 1924, went on trial before Judge D. P. McPherson, at 11:35 o'clock this morning.

Shattering precedence of many years standing in murder trials in the local courts, the first man called for jury duty was accepted. He is Hugh McIlhenny, a former resident of Gettysburg, now residing in Straban township. He was accepted by George J. Benner, Hartman's counsel, after a short examination, and a cross-examination at the hands of J. Donald Swope, who is assisting John P. Butt, district attorney, in the trial of the case. Two other prospective jurors had been examined up to noon, but both were challenged and dismissed.

A total of eleven were examined to 2:30 this afternoon, with but one man accepted. Of the eight this afternoon, seven had fixed opinions, and one, John Krug, Conewago township, was opposed to capital punishment, he said. Sixty men are in the panel for this term of court.

The seven dismissed were Thomas Walter, Hamiltonban township; Elmer G. Worley, Littlestown; Frank Beachtel, Littlestown; Cecil Guise, Straban township; E. C. Marker, Hamiltonban township; N. K. Hoffman, Tyrone township, and H. O. Harner, Tyrone township.

Five jurors were excused by Judge McPherson. They were Emanuel Spangler, David Taylor, Jacob Kemper, Harvey Tressler and J. E. Zimmerman.

The commonwealth was represented during the forenoon by Mr. Swope, while District Attorney Butt was engaged with the presentation of bills before the grand jury.

Hartman, wearing a dark blue suit, neatly pressed, a black tie and tan shoes, was brought into the crowded court room, at 11:30 o'clock, handcuffed to Deputy Sheriff Blaine E. Bixler, who unattended had brought him down from the jail. After a short delay, Hartman was asked to stand up while Deputy Clerk of the Courts William E. Olinger read the indictment, which charged him with murder.

While Deputy Olinger read the indictment, with the words "malice aforethought" standing out most prominently in the reading, Hartman did not flinch in the least, and when asked what plea he had to enter replied, in a firm tone of voice, "Not guilty."

"How will you be tried?" was then asked of him by Mr. Olinger. Upon the prompting of Judge McPherson, Hartman replied, "By God and my countrymen."

"May God bring you just deliverance," was the formal answer of Judge McPherson to Hartman's utterance.

The faded walls of the old courtroom heaved in a capacity crowd long before the January term of court got under way at 10:30 o'clock, with the usual formalities attending the opening of a regular quarterly session. Interest in the routine business which occupied the court's time before the Hartman case was called was at a low point, the spectators preferring to talk with their neighbors on the various aspects of the murder case.

Hartman's father, a middle aged man, occupied a seat on the second row, near the aisle. When his son was brought into the court, the elder Hartman buried his face in his hand and afterward kept his head held in his hand, which he propped on the edge of the seat.

Numerous members of the state police force, all of them in plain clothes, were seen in the crowd of the courtroom, and others were expected to be present when the trial gets under way. Major Lynn G. Adams, head of the state police force in Pennsylvania, who personally directed the man-hunt for Hartman, following the murder near Graeffenburg Inn last October, was expected to be here for several days.

After word had gone out that Hartman was on his way from the jail, the crowd in the courtroom swelled precipitously, and many persons, unable to find seats, stood in the aisles along the walls.

After Hartman had been brought into the courtroom, he was unmanacled from Officer Bixler and took a seat beside Mr. Benner, his counsel, at the counsel table. Sheriff John C. Shealer sat on the other side of the accused man.

Hartman and his attorney conversed for a few minutes, and smiles passed over the accused man's face, although he was not seen to smile afterward. (Continued on Second Page).

COMMITTEE BUYS 50,000 ROADMAPS

Chamber of Commerce Publicity Organization Fires Opening Shot in Propaganda Campaign.

The opening shot of the coming season was fired by the publicity bureau of the Chamber of Commerce at a meeting at the Hotel Gettysburg Saturday noon, when an order for 50,000 folders was placed with the Rand McNally Company, of Chicago.

Those familiar with folders as issued by other towns and individuals were firm in their declaration that Gettysburg this year will have one of the best folders that will be issued. The cover page is a work of art especially prepared by an artist in the office of the successful map publishing bidders. It depicts a cavalry charge up a hill with shot and shell bursting all around them. In the left hand corner of the cover illustration which is nine by eight inches is another drawing depicting a mountain view of splendid scenery and a concrete road. This view is five by three inches in size.

The covers are made up in two colors and besides being distinctive is without parallel in its suggestive power. In the upper right hand corner in neat lettering appears "Auto Trails to and from Gettysburg" and in the lower right in small art lettering, "Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce."

HONOR MEMORY

stroke. Mrs. Picking arose shortly after six o'clock Saturday morning and had gone into the kitchen. Later she heard a noise as of labored breathing from Mr. Picking's bedroom and entering the room was unable to arouse her husband. A physician was summoned, but death had come before medical attention could be administered.

The honorary pall-bearers were: Dr. H. W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College; John A. Dapp, president of the college board; Judge Donald P. McPherson, Dr. J. A. Singmaster, president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary; I. L. Taylor, cashier of the Gettysburg National Bank; Attorney George J. Benner, Dr. Charles H. Huber, headmaster of Gettysburg Academy; Judge S. McC. Swope, Professor C. B. Stover, college faculty member; E. M. Bender, cashier Lincoln Trust Co.; Dr. Milton Valentine, college faculty member.

The active pall-bearers, selected from the student body of college, were: M. E. Gladfelter, Ray Singley, C. W. Beachem, Edward Emanuel, E. R. Boblitz and Frank H. Shimmer.

In paying a striking tribute to Mr. Picking in his funeral remarks, the Rev. Dr. Wagner said in part:

"If we were to select a text it would be the words found in Micah 6:8: 'What doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?' We have not in the ordinary sense of the term selected these words; they have rather offered themselves, they have suggested themselves as we have been looking back over the life of our brother. It is altogether proper to speak on this occasion of 'doing justly.' A sense of justice was elemental in the life of Harry C. Picking. He was ever ready to say, 'Let justice be done though the heavens fall.' He was also ready to say with Wendell Phillips: 'If justice be done the heavens will NOT fall.' To him justice was fundamental to moral honor and security. Any man who had a cause that was just would have willingly submitted it to Harry Picking for his judgment."

"But he also 'loved kindness.' He was of a kind, benevolent spirit, ever ready and anxious to give to those in need. It can also be said of him that he sought 'to walk humbly with his God.' There was no such thing as pride or pretense or assumption in his life. He had that humility which characterizes all sincere and great lives. He was unassuming, modest—almost to a fault."

"He was a man known for his dependableness. When Harry Picking assumed any obligation his friends knew it would be discharged with both efficiency and fidelity. With him no task was done until faithfully done. The service rendered by him to Gettysburg College has been appreciated but never fully appreciated. He gave to this work which he loved that high degree of service and devotion which are not always apparent on the surface."

"He was a faithful, consistent member of his church, of which he was an officer for many years. He was regular in attendance of public worship and always loyal to all the interests of the congregation."

"As a citizen, a neighbor, a friend, an officer of the college and the theological seminary, and as a member of the church, he will be long remembered and always respected. Such an achievement is worthwhile. It enjoys, as it deserves, the respect of his fellowmen and the favor of his God."

Occupants of a seven-passenger automobile, driven by Carson L. Linebaugh, York building contractor, had a miraculous escape from serious injury Sunday afternoon when the motor car turned a double somersault on the Lincoln Highway about one mile east of Abbottstown. The car was badly damaged.

Mr. Linebaugh, owner and driver of the car, is confined to bed at his residence, 648 Company street, York, suffering from an injury to his right leg and bruised forehead. He also complains of pain in the region of his neck.

Two stitches were used to close the wound. Other of the Linebaugh children, Janet and Ernest Linebaugh, and several friends, Paul Miller and Charles Barbill, who were also in the car, escaped injury.

Mr. Linebaugh was driving the big car toward Abbottstown about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon when something happened to the mechanism, the car skidded, turned a double somersault, and landed on its four wheels.

Several motorists who came along assisted the injured to the office of Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown, and that physician gave the necessary aid. Later the Linebaughs and their friends were taken to York. As soon as he arrived home Mr. Linebaugh went to bed.

The automobile was taken to York where it will be repaired. Both sides of the car are damaged, the left side to a greater extent than the right; the top is broken, head lights damaged, and the disc of left front wheel is bent.

Bar No. 13 In New Medical Building

San Francisco, Jan. 26.—The fifteen-story medical and dental building under way here will have floor numbers running from 1 to 16, although the structure will be fifteen stories high. The doctors and dentists, who are putting it up under a cooperative arrangement, explain that the thirteenth floor has been eliminated, not because they are superstitious, but because, in their opinion, the general public prefers not to have medical or dental treatment on the thirteenth floor.

HUGH M'ILHENNY IS FIRST JUROR

Sergeant A. F. Dahlstrom, in charge of the local substation of the state police, who also was active in the hunt for Hartman, after the killing, took his place beside Assistant District Attorney Swope, and frequently, during the examination of venemen, Mr. Swope talked with him.

Hartman Asks No Leniency

On the way from the jail to the courthouse, Hartman said to Deputy Exler: "I hope there is a little hope for me." Hartman, the officer said, seemed in good spirits, and was playing cards in the corridor of the jail when he was asked to accompany the officer to the courthouse for his trial.

After Hartman was in the courtroom for several minutes, Miss Emilie Schaff was sworn in by Judge McPherson as the official court stenographer for the trial of the Hartman case.

A short wait was occasioned when Judge McPherson asked Deputy Clerk Olinger to arraign the prisoner. It was necessary for Special Prosecuting Attorney Swope to go to the grand jury room to get from District Attorney Butt the indictment of the November grand jury, when Hartman was charged with first degree murder. District Attorney Butt came into the courtroom and got the paper for Mr. Swope, who in turn handed it to Deputy Clerk Olinger.

Olinger Reads Indictment

"Prisoner, stand up," was the command given Hartman by Mr. Olinger, who then proceeded to read the bill of indictment, in which the prisoner is officially charged with the murder of Trooper Haley on the Lincoln Highway, west of Gettysburg, on October 14, last. The case is listed as No. 34, November term, and was properly certified to the court of over and terminer from the lower division of the criminal court.

Hugh McIlheny, the first veneman called, walked into the enclosure before the bench and the formality of having him look upon the prisoner and the prisoner look upon him, for challenge, was gone through, after which Deputy Clerk Olinger administered the customary oath.

Mr. Swope was given the first opportunity to examine the prospective jurymen. In reply to Mr. Swope's questions, Mr. McIlheny declared he had no conscientious scruples against capital punishment, and that he had not formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

The veneman was then turned over to Attorney Benner for cross-examination. In answer to Mr. Benner's questions, Mr. McIlheny declared he had read accounts of the murder in local newspapers, but that he believed he could go into the jury box and solely upon the evidence produced in court could pass upon the guilt or innocence of the accused man.

At the conclusion of Mr. Benner's cross-examination, the juror was turned over to Mr. Swope, who said he was satisfied, and Mr. Benner replied: "No challenge," which gave Mr. McIlheny the distinction of being the first man selected for the jury in this case, which has attracted state-wide interest.

David Irvin Challenged

David Irvin, of Gettysburg, was next called, and after the formalities of a challenge by the prisoner and the administration of an oath, took the stand and was examined by Mr. Benner. Since read accounts of the murder in newspapers, Mr. Irvin said he had studied his conscience and that he had formed and had expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of Hartman.

Without being cross-examined by Attorney Swope, Mr. Irvin was challenged for cause by Mr. Benner, which challenge was sustained by Judge McPherson, and the juror dismissed.

S. S. Orner, of Butler township, was then summoned, and the customary procedure incident to his being sworn in was gone through. Upon the examination by Prosecutor Swope, Mr. Orner stated that he had read about the case, talked about it with his neighbors, but had formed no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused man. When asked by Mr. Swope if he belonged to any secret organizations, which might have an effect upon his verdict because Hartman belonged to the same organization, Mr. Orner stated that he was a member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. "Is that the only one?" Mr. Swope asked.

Without waiting for a reply the special prosecutor asked further: "Do you belong to the Ku Klux Klan?" "No, sir," replied the prospective juror.

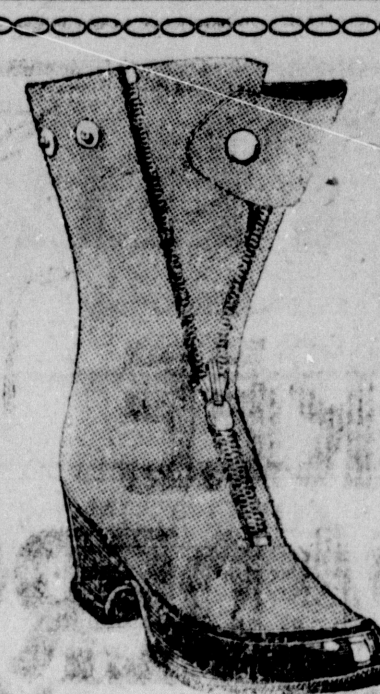

Juryman Is Guarded

Mr. Swope then challenged Mr. Orner and he was dismissed. As Mr. Orner was leaving the stand, the bell in the cupola of the courthouse struck 12 o'clock. Judge McPherson indicated that a recess would be taken, and requested that no more venemen be called.

The court appointed H. C. Bucher, Cashtown, and G. S. Gartman, Lattimore township, as special tipstiffs to attend Mr. McIlheny, the one man accepted for jury service. These men accompanied Mr. McIlheny to the Eagle Hotel for lunch, after court recessed.

After the appointment of the special tipstiffs, Judge McPherson ordered the court to recess until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

After the crowd in the courtroom had dispersed, Hartman was taken back to his cell at the jail, the preliminary skirmish of the battle for his life ended.

ZIPPERS

Two Questions

- 1 Did anyone tell you that "ZIPPERS" are not being made?
- 2 Did anyone tell you that the patent ZIP fastener would wear out?

TWO ANSWERS

1 They are made in ever increasing quantity. We have just received a shipment of them.

2 The patent ZIP fastener is guaranteed for the life of the "ZIPPER" boots. The maker instructs us to give new pairs to replace any found defective.

We have replaced but two pairs out of all the "ZIPPERS" that we sold last winter and this winter. Imitations of the "ZIPPERS" are being put on the market by other makers. If it is not made by B. F. Goodrich Co., it is not a "ZIPPER." Insist on seeing the word "ZIPPER" we have them for Men—Women—Children.

ASSEMBLY TO GET PINCHOT MESSAGE TRIMS C. H. S. FIVE

Ready For Presentation Tuesday to Legislature; Storm Centers of Legislation Being Drafted.

(By Associated Press.)

Harrisburg, Jan. 26.—Drafts of legislation which is expected to prove the storm center of the present session of the general assembly were on their way to completion today as members arrived for the reconvening at 9 o'clock tonight.

Governor Pinchot's second budget which he plans to submit in a message to a joint session at noon tomorrow was in the hands of the printer and a conference of dry workers' with the governor was set at 11 o'clock for consideration of the final draft of the administration's bill to regulate breweries and distilleries.

The budget is expected to give the administration's estimate of revenues and expenditures for the closing two years of Governor's Pinchot's term and to form the basis of the governor's action on appropriation legislation. Scores of appropriation bills mainly for hospitals and institutions were introduced by members last week with the view to early passage and presentation to the executive for his action.

The prohibition enforcement bill which will embody the features contained in the two separate bills defeated in 1923 will be backed by the governor and dry organizations of the state whose representatives took part with him in a conference last week in support of one measure. This is expected to go into the legislature without delay.

The senate has a calendar of one bill for consideration tonight. This is the measure to provide means of utilizing the $50,000,000 highway bond issue of 1923, the original act having been held unconstitutional.

The FREE TRADERS

By Victor Rousseau

"Oh, I've heard that before, and when I put you to the test I found just what those words were worth," she answered lightly. "No, please forget what I have just said to you. I didn't mean it, anyway. There is no such man as I spoke of. There couldn't be, for he would have been killed long ago. I was just wondering whether I was to take you seriously or not—and I found we were both playing a game. Good-night!"

She moved away abruptly and went into her tent.

And all that night he lay, hardly dozing, his automatic beside his hand, waiting and wondering.

CHAPTER IV

The Trap Is Sprung

In the morning she greeted him with a forced gaiety. She nodded and smiled when she came out of her tent.

"Well, we shall ride on together today, I suppose," she said. "I have told you that I do not desire your company, and that your enterprise is probably a dangerous one. You have taken the responsibility upon yourself. With the understanding, we go as companions instead of enemies. Is that not so?"

And this time it was the girl who extended her hand. Lee took it and held it for a moment in his own.

"That's the understanding," he answered. "I intend to see you to your destination, wherever that is, and after that you need not be afraid of my troubling you any more."

"And as for yesterday," said the girl, "you will forget that I was a little hysterical and upset? You see, it is quite an ordeal, going on so long a journey, and I was tired and said foolish things that had no meaning in them at all."

She watched Lee's face closely as she said this. But Lee did not reply.

They mounted and continued the journey. It was about ten o'clock when they heard two or three full reverberations in the distance. The girl, who was riding a few yards ahead of Lee, reined in and stood her horse upon a turfy hillock, waiting for him to catch up with her.

"What was that?" she asked, looking at him with startled eyes.

"Dynamite," Lee responded.

"Dynamite? Why—who would—?"

"Some prospector blasting rock on his claim, no doubt," answered Lee, and again there sounded a detonation.

She seemed to muse a moment or two. "It rather startled me," she said. "I have been afraid since those two men left us—afraid some harm may come to you from them. You will be on your guard, won't you?"

"Yes, I promise you that," Lee answered; and she fixed her eyes on his face with her peculiar scrutiny for a few moments, and then started her horse.

The afternoon began to wear away. They were slowly descending toward the northern pass of the range, beyond which lay the immense territories that they had seen. They began to traverse precarious ledges, overhung by huge boulders, prismatic from the corrosion of the season. Underneath them, at the bottom of a long descent, in places nearly perpendicular, the torrent raced among the rocks.

It was so still upon those heights that the rush of the torrent far underneath them sounded thunderous; and the air was so calm, the sky so blue, that it might have been an Italian summer, rather than a Canadian autumn. An eagle, floating motionless, high overhead, seemed to have been pinned against the background of the blue void.

The girl reined in and waited for Lee to ride up to her.

"Be very careful with that horse of yours," he said. "There's a difficult bit a little distance ahead, but it's the last, and then we'll have an easy journey down through the pass."

She started off again, Lee following some twenty paces behind her. But of a sudden Lee's horse halted, laid back his ears and snorted, planted his forefeet firmly and refused to move.

It was almost impossible to dismount and lead him, for at that point, the narrowest part of the trail, there was hardly standing room for man and beast together. Lee held in the animal with a tight rein, and patted his quivering flanks.

He could not understand what had alarmed it, but now some instinct, perhaps communicated from the beast's brain to his, seemed to tell of danger threatening.

He glanced at the girl, and saw that she was almost across the danger zone. He dared not call to her, for fear of startling her. And, indeed, there was no reason to call, although that baseless instinct was now becoming so strong that it almost amounted to conviction.

He could not see the least cause for apprehension anywhere. His fears appeared absurd, and yet that electric message of warning went flashing back and forth between his mind and that of his frightened mount.

Then suddenly there came the roar of an explosion, muffled underground; the next the rocks over his head seemed to upheave. An enormous crack appeared in the face of the wall of solid rock, which trembled and appeared to move toward him, as if pushed by a gigantic hand; and before the reverberations had died away Lee heard a faint, crepitating sound, like the rustling of paper—the sliding of the interior strata, one upon another.

A little avalanche of stones, dislodged from the surface, came rushing down the face of the cliff midway between the girl and himself. Had Lee's horse not stopped, it must have been swept over the edge of the precipice.

Another roar, and a huge rock toppled and fell, this time behind, and smashed into a score of fragments which went rolling into the chasm below, waking a hundred reverberations among the hills.

And with that Lee understood the devilish scheme that was in the working. The dynamiting which he had heard that afternoon was the preliminary work of the two men in preparing their trap; now they had set fuses among the rocks at the narrowest point of the trail, with the purpose of blowing him to destruction.

And it was a murder plan that would leave no evidence behind it, surer and safer than a rifle shot.

Another explosion; and between the sound of the dull roar and the upheaval, Lee, seeing the girl apparently trying to urge her plunging animal back toward him, stood up in his stirrups and waved his hand frantically toward her.

"Go back! Go back!" he shouted.

But the girl seemed bewildered, and only clung to her plunging, snorting beast, over which she had lost control, the while it pawed the air and danced desperately upon the narrow way.

Lee vaulted from his horse, struggled upon the edge of the precipice, regained his footing, and ran toward her. He caught at her horse's bridle. "Jump! Jump!" he shouted, holding out his arms.

GETTYSBURGIANS LOSE TO P. S. FIVE

Lead Attack During Most of First Half; Time Called With Score 19 to 17 Against Locals.

After trailing during most of the first half Saturday night, Penn State's court team forged to the front as the period whistle blew, and in the final half ran up a 41 to 23 victory over Gettysburg.

The Gettysburgians could not maintain the pace in the last period, scoring but six counts, while the home team counted 22.

Captain Gerhardt's field goal gave Penn State the lead for the first time just before the first half closed, the Nittany tossers leading 19 to 17. The Penn State leader registered five more field goals in the closing frame and was the star of the contest.

"Peg" Gerhardt, Gettysburg center and brother of the Penn State captain, could not follow the pace of his brother, but was a leading performer for the visitors. Tuckey and Captain Peduzzi played a clever floor game for Gettysburg, while MacDonald's work at center was an added Penn State feature.

Find Cock Fight During Booze Raid

Pittsburgh, Jan. 26.—A raid upon a roadhouse early Sunday by state police in search of a liquor cache also uncovered what the troopers described as a cock fight in full progress, which resulted in the arrest of 189 men and the seizure of ninety live game cocks and eight dead ones. M. F. Sullivan, proprietor of the roadhouse, was arrested. All of the alleged participants were released upon forfeiture of $15 each for a hearing today.

The game cocks, said to be valued at several thousand dollars, were turned over to L. W. Ahn, an agent of the humane society. He said the ninety live birds would be killed and distributed to various hospitals in the city.

Agents of the humane society were investigating a report that a cock fight was being held in another section of the city when the state troopers were sent to the roadhouse to make a search for liquor.

INCREASE P. M.'S PAY

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Bloomsburg's postmaster will get an increase of $100 in salary as a result of the business done during the past year. The receipts at the local office passed the $50,000 mark in 1924, the greatest in history, and were about $4,000 more than in 1923, the previous best year.

It is little the sign of a wise or good man to suffer temperance in order to purchase the repute of a generous entertainer.

"It's Easy to Cut Down Repairs

—Just take the trouble to know that your motor is safely lubricated!"

"75% of all motor repair work brought into the shop is directly traceable to poor lubrication. I may be knocking my own game but I hate to see good motors abused—and the manufacturers today are building wonderful motors—motors that with a little common-sense handling will carry you thousands of miles, before you run into any trouble.

I haven't any sympathy for the fellow who lets any old kind of oil be put into his motor and then yells his head off when he gets his bill for repairing bearings or scored cylinders.

Pennzoil means safe lubrication. Every drop is pure Pennsylvania. When you put Pennzoil into your car, you are getting the identical oil that Lieutenant Doolittle used in making his one-stop flight across the continent, and the same oil which for five years has lubricated the majority of winners in the famous yearly Yosemite Valley Economy Run. You'll find Pennzoil topping the list of oils recommended by the world's largest motor corporation.

AN EVENING THOUGHT

It is in loving—not in being loved,
The heart is blessed.
'T is in giving—not in seeking gifts,
We find our quest.
Whatever by thy loving or thy need, that do thou give,
So shall thy soul be fed and thou indeed shalt truly live.

THE COMMUNITY'S LOSS

The community was visibly shocked to learn of the sudden death of Harry C. Picking.

A native and life long resident of Adams county, Mr. Picking won positions of honor and trust through the confidence of his fellow men, based on his long and intimate association with the people and institutions of the vicinity. His faithfulness to duty and the conscientious manner in which he discharged the obligations placed upon his shoulders, whether in the important position of treasurer of the college, or as president of the county's oldest and largest bank, or the numerous other lines of endeavor with which he was associated, won for him the abiding regard and esteem of all who knew him.

The community, indeed, suffers a distinct loss in the death of Harry C.
Picking, while his life, radiating as it did a sterling honesty and devotion to duty, set a standard which the many young men of town and college with whom he came into contact might well emulate to great advantage.

When the supreme faculties move regularly, as the inferior affections following, there arises a serenity and completeness upon the whole soul.

Honesty is the best policy, but he who acts on that principle is not an honest man.

PEACE IN THE HOME

A little path to a little gate,
A shout of glee where the children
wait;
A simple meal when the day is done,
Good appetites when the food comes

Oh, what excellents this anywhere?

Count your riches and boast your fame
But more than these you can never

The faith and love of the little few Who watch and wait at the dusk for you,
If your home be glad at the long day's close,
You have all that any man ever knows.

Your Income Tax

Under the revenue act of 1924, thousands of persons are required to file returns of income although the incomes are not taxable. The act provides that returns shall be filed by every single person whose net income for 1924 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more, and by married couples living together, whose aggregate net income was $2,500 or more, or whose aggregate gross income was $5,000 or more. The exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together, plus a $400 credit for each dependent. A person may have a gross income of $5,000 and, by reason of the deductions for business expense, bad debts, losses, etc., a net income of less than $1,000. A single person may have an exemption of $2,500 as the head of a family. Nevertheless, returns are required in both instances.

Heavy penalties are provided by the act for failure to file a return and pay at least one-fourth of the amount of tax due within the time prescribed, on or before March 15, 1925.

cover the entire inside of the pamphlet. The first features the Lincoln Highway and all trails in to Gettysburg. It extends west as far as St. Louis, north to Portsmouth, Maine, whose parallel line includes Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Milwaukee and all important northern cities. The map extends to Roanoke, Virginia on the south. It is complete in detail, containing the distances between towns on the map. Like all the maps on this page it is finished in two colors.

The second map appears in the center and is a close-up of Gettysburg and the neighboring towns, intending to illustrate the accessibility of Gettysburg from Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, etc. On either side of the center map pictures of road scenes will be used giving the road conditions around Gettysburg, both in the map form and photographically.

Trunk Line Map

On the bottom of the page appears a map showing the trunk lines from Canada to Florida, featuring the advisability of going through Gettysburg.

The maps will be delivered between the first and fifteenth of March. Half of the shipment of fifty thousand will be distributed by the publishers through an exchange plan that they operate. This method was investigated and found to be far superior and less expensive than if it were done here.

Distribution will be made in Florida and the southern resorts as soon as the folder is completed, in time to reach the general exodus to the north.
This plan was followed last year with excellent results.

One of the features of the pamphlet will be the art layouts. Pictures will predominate, the committee believing they make any pamphlet worth keeping. All printed matter will be in the form of paragraph descriptions, thus eliminating all solid tiresome reading matter.

The folder selected was considered the best of several submitted by dif-

play, is also a playlet worthy of note.
Different in form and character from the prize-winning sketch, it showed the results of careful thought and a knowledge of stage craft.

The plot was woven about a Civil War veteran, who fought in the Battle of Gettysburg, was wounded and forgot his name after recovering from his injuries, and who is to be evicted from his humble home on Memorial day. There is considerable pathos in the lines, but that only serves to heighten the ending, when he finally remembers his name, which entitles him to three years back pension.

One-Act Tragedy

Between the two locally written sketches was sandwiched a one-act tragedy of Eugene O'Neill, considered by many as one of America's foremost dramatists. The playlet, "Ile," had the true O'Neillian stamp, and was brimful of pathos, sadness and brutality. The story is one of a whaling captain, who takes his wife along on a voyage for "ile," as the captain calls the whale oil. The wife becomes insane, when her husband refuses to turn back, after having spent two years in the frozen waters of the north, being determined to go on in search of whale and the elusive "ile."

During the lull between these two malignant tragedies and the light farce which followed, the audience was asked to vote on the question of whether the captain was justified in going ahead, at the expense of driving his wife into insanity. The audience voted 137 to 69 that he was not justified in his action, and that he should have turned back upon the entreaties of his wife.

good as has been seen at the chapel in recent years. The difficult character parts, particularly that of the wife, taken by Miss Ruth Scott, of Gettysburg, were interpreted in a way that left little or nothing to be desired, according to the playgoers.

The plot of "Two Gettysburgians in Shakespeare's Court" was light, being woven around a dream of two college students, who, in fancy, are taken to Shakespeare's court. In writing the play, the author was obliged to scan more than a dozen plays of the noted author for speeches suitable to carry along the dialogue and action.

The casts of the three plays, in the order in which they were presented, follow:

QUART OF WATER
CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You.

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of stinging, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year. Adv.

THE TOUGHEST OLD COUGH

Can Now Be Stopped

Lingering coughs—the kind that hang on and hang on and rob a man of his sleep—the kind that makes him peevish and all worn out.

Those are the breeds of coughs that prove that common cough syrups are about as useful as a bottle of ginger pop.

The quickest and surest way to get rid of a persistent cough is to take a teaspoonful of Broncholine Emulsion four times a day.

It's made to stop the old-timers—the tough ones—and it does it with out any loss of time.

And, remember, there is no chloroform—no sugar—no dope in this grand cough medicine. It's a prescription for stubborn coughs and that's the kind it speedily conquers.

For ordinary coughs one or two doses is usually enough. Peoples Drug Store and dealers everywhere can supply you. Adv.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—adv.

Modesty seldom resides in a breast that is not enriched with nobler virtues.

GOV. FERGUSON IN INAUGURAL GOWN.

Above is shown Governor Miriam A. Ferguson, first woman governor of Texas, wearing the gown she wore when she took the oath of office in the State House at Austin. The gown, made by a New York modiste, is of black satin, with wide flowing sleeves, embroidered in steel and crystal beads. Bands of fur are artistically placed in the center of the embroidery, on the sleeves and around the bottom of the skirt. It is a straight-line garment, tying in front, the back panel hanging loose from the shoulders.

England Prepares Drastic Campaign on All Smugglers

London.—Hundreds of miles of lonely stretches along the coastline of England and Scotland will shortly come under the eagle eye of the revenue department focused from the skies in an airplane. A fleet of machines has been added to the existing equipment to protect the northern and eastern Scottish coasts, long suspected of being the favorite stopping off places of international smugglers.

Patrolling the long coast line surrounding England, when almost every section is within a day's run from countries producing dutiable goods, has always been a problem for the British government except for the few intervals when the Liberal Free Trade party occupied Downing street. In Victorian days only in the populous sections was any permanent endeavor made to guard the coast line against smugglers. Revenue ships often made circuits of the island, or busied themselves in some locality suspected of harboring defaulters against Her Majesty's rightful duties, but daily patrolling of some 3,500 miles was not even attempted.

Faster traveling, which developed after 1895, found the government also in a comparative condition of speed, and in a single year the personnel of the coast guard was trebled and all of the English coast and much of the inhabited Scottish coast was patrolled. Certain sections in northern Scotland where several hundred miles are not broken by a single village or cabin always have been a source of trouble to the revenue. Heavy seas have not allowed the small revenue boats to be used, and the cold winters made it impossible for man or beast to make such a long journey without shelter in sight.

During the war it was necessary to use the personnel of the coast guard for other work, and the smugglers were handed over to the watchfulness of the British Navy. The navy and the war succeeded in reducing smuggling to almost nothing, but after the armistice and before the end of the years necessary to reorganize the guard, smugglers became more active than ever before.

According to reports there were 890 convictions last year for smuggling and about $15,000,000 worth of goods was confiscated.

The revenue department has now obtained a fleet of hydroplanes which will cover all the bare spots along the coast, and for the first time in history every bit of coastline of the islands of England, Scotland and Wales will be under surveillance.

The construction of these tracks will furnish connections between the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and the Monongahela railroads and afford a new outlet for traffic.
